perplexity

Knight Rider 1982 Female car with a purple flashing light scanner

There is no female car with a purple flashing light scanner in the original 1982 Knight Rider TV series. The iconic car in the series is KITT (Knight Industries Two Thousand), a black 1982 Pontiac Firebird Trans Am with a red scanner light on the front hood[1] [2]. KITT is voiced by William Daniels and is depicted as a male artificial intelligence.

The only other notable car with a scanner in the original series is KARR (Knight Automated Roving Robot), KITT's prototype and nemesis. KARR also features a scanner light, but it is amber/yellow, not purple, and the car is not characterized as female[2].

There are no references in the provided sources or in Knight Rider canon to a female car with a purple scanner in the 1982 series. Some fan discussions and custom car builds may have experimented with different colors or concepts, but these are not part of the official show[3] [4].

If you are referring to a different Knight Rider adaptation, spin-off, or a fan creation, please specify for more targeted information.

KITT (Knight Industries Two Thousand) car with open doors and red scanner light on display at Universal Studios.

⁂

1. https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Knight_Rider_(1982_TV_series)
2. https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/KITT
3. https://www.thirdgen.org/forums/auto-detailing-appearance/300812-knight-rider-idea.html
4. https://knightrideronline.com/forum/viewtopic.php?t=16909